In 1991, Anita Hill told the world that Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas had sexually harassed her. Thirty years later, we’re still feeling the ripple effects of that testimony—in our politics and our lives. This four-part podcast explores the enduring impact of that moment, with new insights and on-the-ground stories from guests like Tarana Burke, Kerry Washington and Professor Hill herself, in her first-ever public conversation with Dr. Christine Blasey Ford, who testified 27 years after her.

Our discussion will focus on the feminist and diversity aspects of their discussion. The focus will not be their testimony as a political issue, but about women not being heard/listened to/respected. We will focus on the problem and whether progress has been made in the 27 years between their testimonies.
